

iMouse: The Apple-ization of Disney

FAST COMPANY

JUNE 2007

CHINA'S NEW CREATIVE CLASS

How a Dynamic,
Business-Savvy
Generation Is Poised to Redefine
Product Design,
Architecture,
Fashion &
Entertainment

“THERE ARE GREAT GENIUSES
DEVELOPING IN CHINA.
WE'RE JUST A BABY IN THESE CREATIVE AREAS, ” BUT WE'RE LEARNING.”

—ZIYI ZHANG
Film actor

PLUS

WAL-MART:
CAVEMEN
TO THE RESCUE

THE MOST DANGEROUS JOB IN BUSINESS

MICROSOFT FINDS ITS VOICE

INSIDE SUN'S SECRET
BLACK BOX

$4.99 US $5.99 CANADA FASTCOMPANY.COM

JUNO 07

DEPARTMENTS

14 FROM THE EDITOR

18 CONTRIBUTORS

21 FEEDBACK

FAST TALK

23 THE SELLING OF A PRESIDENT

- > EDWARDS ONLINE | Mathew Gross
- > RNC'S LOADED GUN | Laura Crawford
- > DEMS' ATM | Matt DeBergalis
- > OBAMA'S GRASSROOTS | Kim Mack
- > MCCAIN'S ADMAN | Russ Schriefer
- > BLOG POWER | Markos Moulitsas

NEXT

33 THE MOST DANGEROUS JOB IN BUSINESS

It's chief marketing officer—and yours may be on the way out. Plus: a portfolio of recent CMO casualties.
By Ellen McGirt

[INNOVATION]

37 THE LAST GREEN MILE

New companies that want to do for clean energy what Home Depot did for home improvement.

38 BEST BLOGS: SUSTAINABILITY

Three Web sites that seek to help you save the world.

40 ON THE HORIZON

Your Second Life avatar in 3-D; digital tags for your dinner; the watch of tomorrow.

[DESIGN]

42 FURNITURE FOR KEEPS

Eight design stars, 11 pieces, one collection.

46 SKETCHPAD: TURBO-CHEF SPEEDCOOK OVEN

Frog design's challenge: transform a high-tech commercial oven into the heart of the home.

[TECH]

48 MICROSOFT SPEAKS

Tellme Networks' Mike McCue talks about the future of voice recognition now that his company is part of "the underdog" in Redmond.

50 GREAT PERFORMANCES

Digital wizardry improves on celebrated recordings.

52 CHANGE FOR A DOLLAR

Mix-your-own ice cream, complete with sprinkles, and other treats from vending machines.

[BOOKS]

54 A FISHY EXPEDITION

How sushi became a signature dish on the global menu.

[ROAD WARRIOR]

56 FUN RUNS

Customized running tours are coming to cities where you're going.

COLUMNS

58 MADE TO STICK

Your product may be fine, but will it spark a conversation?
By Chip Heath and Dan Heath

61 OPEN DEBATE

Should your boss be able to limit your freedom of speech? Bruce Barry v. Ermis Sfakiyanudis

112 FINAL WORD

The Supreme Court weighs in on global warming. By Daniel C. Esty

23

Laura Crawford:

"For the next 17 months, I'll be on call 24 hours a day."

37

42

58

Photographs: Randal Ford (Crawford)

FURNITURE FOR KEEPS

Eight design stars, no matched suites. That's the idea behind Bernhardt's striking Global Edition.

By Linda Tischler

REMY LOUNGE CHAIR JEFFREY BERNETT

New York City-based Bennett, founder of the design consultancy CDS, said he wanted his lounge chair, suspended over a stainless-steel swivel base, to "sit well and be a graceful and elegant seating solution for both commercial and residential settings." $1,400

WHEN JERRY HELLING SEES retailers offering a five-piece matched living room "suite" of furniture, he feels a little depressed. "As they say down here in Carolina, it jes' ain't right," he says, affecting a disheartened Southern drawl. "You shouldn't go in and buy a whole roomful of furniture."

That might seem an odd thing for a furniture maker to say. But Helling, creative director of Bernhardt Design, the cutting-edge, design-driven division of the venerable North Carolina firm, loves furniture too much to see it purchased like a Happy Meal. "These mega-lifestyle collections don't represent true, long-lasting design," he says. "They're paint-by-number solutions."

Helling would like to see Americans approach the task more like Europeans do: shopping carefully for individual pieces, assembling them in a way that reflects their style, and keeping them for a good long time. And he's going to help us. At the 2007 International Contemporary Furniture Fair in New York, Bernhardt is set to debut the Global Edition, a line of furniture expressly created to stand the test of time.

ARO STOOL | LIEVORE ALTHERR MOLINA

The Barcelona team of Alberto Lievore, Jeanette Altherr, and Manel Molina wanted to create a stool that appeared spatially weightless—just three loops and two legs. The rotating seat, in walnut, fabric, or leather, is meant to be discreet, "just like the barman who listens to everything and says nothing." $700

WHISPER CHAIR | CULDESAC

Pepe Garcia, Alberto Martinez, and Lucia del Portillo, of Spain's CuldeSac, say their design is visually "all connected. If you drew this chair on a piece of paper, your pen would never leave the page." Carved from solid maple. Available in fabric ($700) or leather ($800).

The collection features 11 pieces of furniture, and a complementary line of fabrics, from eight distinguished international designers, including Yves Béhar, Shin Azumi, PearsonLloyd, Arik Levy, CuldeSac, Jeffrey Bennett, Christian Biecher, and Lievore Altherr Molina. While presented as a unified body of work, each piece is meant to be used individually and in a wide range of environments. (Prices range from $250 for PearsonLloyd's stacking chair to $4,000 for Levy's leather sofa; they'll be available to order in late May.)

The line is the result of a quest Helling and his team undertook in early 2006, when they compiled a list of 50 designers or design firms whose work they admired. They invited eight of the stars to create a single piece that would be "best of show" in its category. The catch: None of the designers knew the identities of their counterparts. "If each piece was to be truly universal, we didn't want them to be influenced by each other in any way," Helling says.

That created a tantalizing sense of mystery, says Luke Pearson of London's PearsonLloyd. "But in a way, we didn't want to know the others. It shouldn't make any difference to what we do." Béhar, who designed the Fly bench, found the exercise "a little bit like a wine tasting: I knew there were going to be some grand cru there, and I just wanted to add the best I could produce."

What unites the line is its sense of timeless simplicity (a result that can be maddeningly difficult to achieve; one piece, CuldeSac's wooden chair, required 14 iterations over 20 months to attain the desired appearance of effortlessness). Helling hopes buyers will grow so fond of their purchases that they'll hang on to them, handing them down to their children as cherished heirlooms. That would satisfy his desire to create not only a lasting design legacy but an environmentally responsible one as well. In the furniture trade, "we're still too focused on recyclability and cradle-to-cradle," he says. "We should spend our effort creating things that will last and that we will want to keep forever."

COAST STACKING CHAIR | PEARSONLLOYD

The London team of Tom Lloyd and Luke Pearson set out to create an "honest piece of design that combined a high-tech seating dish with high comfort." The result: technical complexity merged with visual simplicity. Available in red, orange, black, and white. $250

FLY BENCH | YVES BÉHAR

Béhar, founder of the San Francisco studio fuseproject, created the sculpturally expressive Fly bench out of two triangular stainless-steel shapes combined at their apex for structural integrity. "It's about tension, a walnut plank lifted effortlessly in mid-air." $1,500

ONDA CHAIR | CHRISTIAN BIECHER

French architect Biecher wanted to design something simple that responded to the weight of the body in it. He used thin legs, so the chair would appear to float, and shaped them like triangles "because they are sharp shapes, very elegant." $1,000